MERCURY DROPS TO 2 BELOW ZERO

Lowest Temperature of Season Recorded Last Night—5 Above on December 18.

SNOW STORM IS GENERAL

Several Inches of Snow Predicted for Southern Indiana in Next Twenty-four Hours.

The temperature early this morning was the lowest of the winter season according to Ira Bedel, local weather observer. The thermometer hit the lowest mark about 6 o'clock this morning when it registered two degrees below zero. A gradual rise in temperature was noticeable during the morning and at noon the thermometer registered 19 above.

A gradual drop in the temperature was noticeable throughout Friday and during Friday night and early this morning the thermometer reached the lowest mark in two years. The coldest day during 1919 was on December 18 when the thermometer registered five degrees above zero.

The snow storm which prevailed throughout the day is general over southern Indiana, according to the state weather bureau at Indianapolis. Snow started falling here about 10 o'clock this morning and at Columbus and other points north the white flakes put in their appearance at an earlier hour. The light snow is scheduled to fall throughout tonight and on Sunday with a gradual rise in temperature Sunday.

The snow will not only be welcomed by the boys and girls who are anxious for coasting and sleigh riding, but possibly more so by the farmers. Many of the farmers have been wishing for a heavy snow and it is believed that thousands of dollars worth of good will result to the wheat in Jackson county if the snow remains on the fields for several weeks.

SAMUEL V. JACKSON, CITY MAIL CARRIER, EXPIRES

Appointed to Service When It Was Established Here in 1900—Funeral to be Held Monday.

Samuel V. Jackson, aged forty-three years, a city postman in the business district for seventeen years, died at 7 o'clock this morning at the Schneek Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Jackson, the son of Thomas M. and Ellen Starr Jackson, was born June 1 1876, in the city of Seymour and resided in his native city his entire life time. He graduated from the Shields High School with the class of 1894 and engaged in news reporting and other occupations until January 15, 1900, when upon the establishment of free mail delivery in the city, he was appointed as substitute carrier, and a little later promoted to a regular carrier, in which work he continued until his fatal illness. He became ill December 27 with an obstruction of the bowels; a surgical operation gave some hope of relief and recovery, but paralysis of the bowels followed, resulting in his death.

His mother, father and two brothers preceded him and he leaves surviving an only sister, Katherine B. Jackson, with whom he had lived since the death of his father nearly four years ago. He was a most efficient mail carrier, quick, accurate and punctual in his work and a man of genial nature and kindly disposition and had a great number of personal friends to whom he was bound by the warmest ties of friendship. Funeral services will be held at the residence at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

New Grocery Store.

Having sold my grocery business at Chestnut Ridge, Ind., and moved to Seymour, I have opened a grocery store at 602 South Walnut street, where we will be pleased to meet all our old customers and friends, and a host of new ones. ## CITY OWES $2,500 ON CURRENT DEBT

Floating Indebtedness on January 1. However, Was Less Than Half That of a Year Ago.

$31,000 BONDS OUTSTANDING

Officials Watching Tax Suit for if Valuation is Decreased Higher Levy Will be Necessary.

The city of Seymour entered the New Year with a floating or current indebtedness of $2,500. The city officials would have much preferred have closed the year with a cash balance but are gratified with the result inasmuch as the current indebtedness in January 1, one year ago was approximately $5,500. During the year they have been able to lift part of this, despite the increased cost of maintaining every department of the city government.

The city, in addition to the current indebtedness, has a bonded debt of $31,000. Bonds to the amount of $15,000 are carried on the city building and do not begin to mature until 1921. The city still owes $2,000 of the Greenman or refunding series, but this will be paid next month. Bonds to the amount of $4,000 on the $10,000 issue sold several years ago to pay for the improvement of street intersections remain unpaid, but will be lifted in part during the present year. The new issue of $10,000 sold to meet the cost of installing the electric post lighting system will not begin to mature for two years.

The city officials and the members of the council have faced some intricate financial problems during the year just closing. The expenses of the city government have soared and presented a difficult situation inasmuch as the income for the twelve months' period was fixed. The tax levy is set each September for the coming year and under the law cannot be changed after the ordinance is approved.

The suit to test the validity of the horizontal increase order of the state tax board is being watched with interest by the city officials. In case the higher courts of the state sustain the decision of Judge James A. Cox of the Jackson circuit court and hold that the state board had no authority to order the horizontal increases in local assessments, an request will be made of the state board for permission to increase the levy for local purposes.

When the city officials reduced the levy for the general fund to one-half of what it was in 1919 they expected that the valuation of property in the city would be twice the former amount. The new levy was intended to raise about $40,000, the amount that has been expended annually for the last three or four years.

If the court should hold that the horizontal increases are not valid and the county auditor is ordered to make a change in the tax duplicate the present levy for general purposes would not produce enough revenue based on the lower assessments. Either the levy would have to be increased, it is pointed out, or the city would have to make arrangements to borrow several thousand dollars to meet its expenses during the coming year.

The levy for the sinking fund was also based on the higher assessments and difficulty would be presented on that score also. The sinking fund is used to pay interest on bonds against the city and to make payments as they fall due and the credit of the municipality would be impaired if these interest and installment payments were not made promptly. This levy would also have to be raised, it is predicted, unless the state tax board has formulated a plan whereby the deficits can be met in some other way.

DEPORTATION OF RADICALS AND ANARCHISTS

Here are some of the "reds" who are being sent back to Russia going aboard ship for their trip to their home land.

71 ARRESTS MADE DURING LAST YEAR

Intoxication Leads All Other Offenses, Resulting in Twenty-two Affidavits in 1919.

$1,423 COLLECTED BY MAYOR

Small Number of Stay Bails Given Indicates Defendants Were Well Supplied With Cash.

The general condition of property in the city during 1919 even manifested itself in the police court according to a report relative to the arrests made by the local police during the last twelve months, which was prepared today by Mayor C. W. Burkart. Usually defendants in the city court claim to be facing financial embarrassment when the fine and court costs are announced, but last year the defendant who asked that he be permitted to furnish a stay bail was an exception. For the first time in years the Mayor was able to compile his annual report without including a list of persons who owed fines to the city. During his term of office, Mayor Burkart has not permitted fines to be paid on the installment plan and this ruling also was a factor in having the docket paid to date on January 1.

During the year a total of seventy-one arrests were made by the local police. Of this number of defendants, fifty paid fines either on conviction or pleas of guilty. Eight were bound over to circuit court, four were acquitted in police court, four were committed to jail, two were sentenced to the state penal farm, two sentences were suspended and one case was dismissed.

The old trouble maker, King Alcohol, refused to give up his place of prestige in 1919. During the year twenty-two arrests were made for intoxication, the largest number for any single offense. Illegal possession of intoxicating liquor was the cause of the second highest number of arrests, eleven being brought into court on that charge. Gaming and assault and battery each scored seven and eight were arrested for speeding. Nine answered to the charge of grand larceny or burglary during the year and four were accused of petit larceny. Two were arrested on statutory charges, two for violating city ordinances and one for train riding.

No arrests have been made here since December 23, the court docket shows and the first three days of the New Year have come and gone without anyone being taken into custody by the police.

The docket reveals the Mayor collected a total of $1,423 during the year in fines and court costs. Of this amount, $636 was paid to the state and $287 was retained by the city. The prosecutor's fees amounted to an even $500 during the year.

The court docket does not begin to show the amount of the work of the police department during the year just closing, for the cases actually filed constitute a small part of a peace officers' duties. Hundreds of calls have been received by the policemen during the twelve months' period, investigations have been made by the score and a number of juvenile cases have been turned over to the circuit judge who serves as juvenile judge in this county. The work of the police department covers a wide scope and much of it is of such a character that definite reports are not filed.

DEMURRER TO INDICTMENT AGAINST SMITH SUSTAINED

Part Owner of Indianapolis News Charged With Making False Statement as to Ownership

By United Press
Indianapolis, June 3—Federal Judge A. B. Anderson today sustained the demurrer to the indictment charging Delavan Smith, one-fourth owner and publisher of the Indianapolis News, with having filed false statements of ownership of the paper. Judge Anderson held that Section 28 of the criminal code of the United States does not apply to the offense with which Smith was charged. This automatically throws the case out of court, unless District Attorney L. E. Slack takes the case to the circuit court of appeals to Chicago.

Smith was indicted August 21 after disclosures to the effect that the late Charles W. Fairbanks was three-fourths owner of the paper prior to his death. Smith was charged in the indictment with having filed affidavits with the postmaster stating that he himself was owner of the entire property.

PROTOCOL TO BE SIGNED BEFORE JANUARY 13

Illness of Kurt Von Lersner Delays Negotiations of Peace Treaty.

By United Press
Paris, January 3—Signing of the protocol and final exchange of ratifications probably will not take place sooner than January 13, it was indicated today. The plan to complete the peace negotiations on January 6, has practically been given up, due to the illness of Kurt Von Lersner, German emissary, and the fact that Premier Clemenceau is on a vacation. Interest in Paris has shifted somewhat from the treaty negotiations to the attitude of Clemenceau towards accepting the presidency. It was said he had agreed to become an honorary member of the senate, but has not consented to be a candidate for the presidency.

FIRE AT ROUNDHOUSE

Overheated Stove Pipe Sets Fire to Roof This Morning.

Damage estimated at $20 was done to the roof at the Baltimore & Ohio roundhouse about 6 o'clock this morning. The fire was started by an overheated stove pipe. The fire department was called and it was necessary to throw a stream of water on the blaze to extinguish it.

Clemenceau to Call Meeting.

By United Press
Paris, January 3—The supreme council today authorized Premier Clemenceau to issue a preliminary call for the first meeting of the League of nations council directing President Wilson to issue a formal call as soon as the Versailles treaty becomes effective.

DEPORTATION TO BE STARTED SOON

Hundreds of "Reds" Taken in Raids Last Night To Be Given Immediate Hearings.

"SOVIET FLEET" TO SAIL AGAIN

Officials Believe Backbone of Revolutionary Movement in This Country is Broken.

By United Press
New York, Jan. 3—The government began to move swiftly today to deport alien "Reds" seized in the nation wide round up conducted by Federal agents last night and this morning.

With isolated raids still continuing here, scores of aliens were hurried to Ellis Island, where preparations were made to rush through their hearing. At the same time special trains were being made ready to bring in hundreds of Reds from other cities for hearings at Ellis Island. It was believed that another "anarchist Ark"—or possibly an entire fleet—would be ready to sail for Europe with hundreds of deportees within a few days.

Of the 650 men and women arrested here, all but 201 were released today.

"I believe we have succeeded in breaking the backbone of the radical revolutionary movement in the United States," Wm. J. Flynn, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, who directed the raids here, declared early today.

The raids in the eastern cities began promptly at 9 o'clock last night and by midnight the majority of warrants had been served, though sporadic raids were still going on at daybreak.

Forty federal operatives here were assisted by 75 policemen in plain clothes. Every known headquarters and gathering place was swooped down upon. About fifty women, ranging in age from 16 to 65 were arrested.

A man who gave his name as Julius Godking and said he was employed in the city tax department, said he was elected secretary of the Harlem branch of the communist party only yesterday.

"I was born in the United States, but I believe in overthrow of this government by force, if necessary," he was quoted as saying.

"I believe the time will soon come when the whole of the United States will be under bolshevik rule."

All aliens included in the prisoners taken in various cities will be brought to Ellis Island immediately. The American citizens are to be turned over to state authorities for prosecution.

4,500 "REDS" ARE TAKEN IN RAIDS

Rifles, Bombs and High Explosives Confiscated by Justice Department Agents.

ROUND-UP IS NATION WIDE

Evidence Secured to Base Proceedings for Deportation of Radical Aliens.

By United Press
Washington, January 3—More than 4,500 alleged radicals have been taken into custody in the nation wide drive it was learned today at the department of justice. The result which is not yet completed has exceeded expectations.

The "Reds" are still being apprehended, it was stated, and the great raids will show a total far above that of the combined "Red" round-ups of the last year.

Complete evidence against more than 2,000 of those now held is in the hands of the department and their deportation will be made, it was stated. The opinion was expressed that ninety percent. of those held will be deported or convicted of criminal anarchy.

The department of justice has listed names of nearly 60,000 "Reds" and it was predicted today that many more roundups will be conducted.

Telephone information from Newark brought the story that twenty-five rifles and large quantities of high explosive bombs had been found there.

Several ships will be needed to deport the prisoners, it was stated at the department of labor. At Ellis Island it was reported the first of the new "anarchist arks" would leave for Europe about January 10.

Details of the organization of two communist parties who sought to sovietize United States were made public today by Francis Gravin, assistant attorney general in charge of the roundup. The revolutionary movement in the country was the result of the third international soviet council held at Moscow March 2-6, 1919, it was stated.

As reports of arrests came in today, the commissioner-general of immigration checked off on a huge "war map" of the United States the locality in which each raid was made. It was expected that each hour would show more revolutionists gathered into the net.

The raids are conducted with the object of securing evidence upon which the department of labor may base proceedings for deportation of aliens. Many of those arrested probably will be released after they have been questioned.

Secret Service men seized large quantities of "Red" literature which, it is understood, proved the existence of a conspiracy to overthrow the government and set up a soviet regime in this country. These documents will be made public after all the plotters implicated are taken into custody. These revolutionary plans, it is understood, were worked out in detail and were ready to be put into operation on short notice.

The raids were planned by Attorney General Palmer and his assistants in the department of justice in cooperation with state and local authorities.

THIRTEEN IN INDIANA CAUGHT IN FEDERAL NET

Former State Secretary of Socialist Party Among Those Taken in Custody.

By United Press

Indianapolis, January 3.—Thirteen persons were caught in Indiana in the federal dragnet spread over the country last night and early today for Bolsheviki agitators. Other arrests are expected momentarily. Fifty warrants have been issued. Of the thirteen six were at Clinton, three at Terre Haute, three at Fort Wayne and one at Anderson.

Joseph Zimmerman, former state secretary of the Socialist party, was arrested at Anderson. This was the only name made public. The raids were to continue today in Gary,

TREATY COMPROMISE

According to dispatches from the national capital, the senate is expected to ratify the treaty of peace soon after it reconvenes after the holiday recess. Several conferences between representatives of the opposing factions have been held during the last few days and the public is informed that a compromise program is almost reached. Senator Hitchcock, administration spokesman, has been active in the effecting compromises and, while the President had previously indicated that he would accept no modifications, it is the general belief that the compromise program is going forward with his approval.

The public wants the treaty ratified. But it has insisted and insists now that the ratification be made with American honor. The public is not ready to lay away its rights when they can be retained and the ultimate objects of the treaty attained. The American people are opposed to "entangling alliances" with foreign powers. We want to keep ourselves apart and aloof from petty differences which may arise between European countries. America is ready to assist the world, but we are not ready to police the world.

The objections to the treaty, it appears, have been overcome in a measure, at least, by some of the reservations which will be embodied in the document. These reservations will in nowise interfere with or obstruct the real purpose of the pact. They are intended simply to protect the United States. President Wilson insists that Article ten will not embroil us in European squabbles unless congress votes to step in. The senate desires to go one step further and express the inference in plain language so that all the world may know exactly how we stand. This has been one of the stumbling blocks to ratification, and even if the President does object to the direct language of the proposed reservation it is predicted that a sufficient number of the senators will approve it.

The President has a great opportunity for a master stroke of statesmanship and diplomacy. The question at bar is one which calls for the best judgment of the nation and settlement can be reached only by co-operation of those who are striving to protect the best interests of the United States.

And took our baby by the hand.
How we miss you, Darling Donald,
There is only One can tell.
That is Jesus, for we know it
That he doeth all things well.
Heaven now retains our treasure,
Earth his lonely casket keeps,
And the angels love to linger
Where our darling baby sleeps.

BROWNSTOWN COMMERCIALS WIN FROM L. S. A. S. 46-13

County Seat Basketball Tossers Play
Consistent Game at Lutheran Club Floor.

The local L. S. A. S. basketball team were outclassed, 46 to 13, by the Brownstown Commercial team on the Lutheran club floor last night. The superiority of the visiting team in passing and throwing goals was demonstrated throughout the game. This is the second defeat of the L. S. A. S. to be delivered by the Commercial team this season. A few weeks ago the teams met at the county seat, the Brownstown team easily winning by a score similar to that of last night.

Robertson, of the Commercial, started the scoring with a pretty field goal to be followed by Rebber of the L. S. A. S. who tossed two foul goals that tied the score. The Brownstown team displayed additional pep and took the game in its own hands, completely swamping the locals. Score of the first half: Commercial 24; L. S. A. S. 5.

Ahlbrand, star guard of the Concordia Ramblers, appeared on the L. S. A. S. lineup the second half but was unable to slacken the onslaught of the Brownstown aggregation to a large degree. Bucheimer also of the Ramblers, displayed unusual ability at center the first half and joined his co-worker, Ahlbrand, the second half. The two "stars" co-operated against Kent, leading tosser of the Commercial, and held him scoreless. Despite this fact, however, the Brownstown aggregation came within two points of their score the first half. The final score gave the Commercial the game, 46 to 13.

The Commercial have an unusually strong team. Wednesday night they were defeated by the fast Bloomington Independents, 18 to 15. Last night they held the locals to three field goals and scored twenty-two for their team. They have a strong offensive and defensive aggregation and will give any team a good game.

Summary of the game last night: Commercial (46) L. S. A. S. (13)
Grev, f. Rebber, f.
Kent, f. Bohenkamp, f.
Robertson, c. Bucheimer, c.
McKain, g. Frey, g.
Brodecker, g. Topie, g.

Substitutes: Ahlbrand for Frey.
Field Goals: Grev 7, Kent 5, Robertson 6, McKain 4, Rebber 2, Bucheimer.

Foul goals: Kent 2; Rebber 7.
Referee: Chester Riley.

CRITERION QUARTET TO BE HERE JANUARY 9

Varied Musical Program To Be Given as Next Entertainment of Lyceum Course.

Few quartets in this country have gained such notable comment from critics in music as the Criterion Male Quartet of New York City, which will appear on the Lyceum course here January 9.

John Young, tenor; has been soloist of the Reformed Church of Harlem, New York City, for the past 18 years, and is now under exclusive contract with the Edison Company for records.

Horatio Rench is tenor soloist of the Collegiate Church, New York City. In his extended experience he has achieved remarkable success in opera and concert.

Mr. Reardon, baritone, is an artist who has been commended for his rich, warm voice wherever he has sung. His enunciation and interpretative art are excellent.

Mr. Chalmers, basso, has a deep voice of sympathetic quality and wide range. He has successfully appeared as soloist in conjunction with many of the great artists of the day.

The Criterion Quartet is an ideal attraction, and their varied program will furnish a most enjoyable entertainment.

To be reliable, a storage battery must have well-made plates. Battery solution must be proper strength and required purity.

Battery jars must be mechanically strong and must allow no leakage of current or battery solution.

But it's the insulation between the plates that keeps that battery full of life and adds months to its term of useful service.

FAIL TO WIPE OUT HOOKWORM

Complete Elimination Has Not Yet Been Attained.

TO TAKE UP NEW STUDIES

Report of Rockefeller Foundation Says Further Study and Investigation Is Necessary—Cure of an Individual Found Simple Task, but to Prevent Reinfection From Larvae in Soil Is Difficult—Fight on Fifteen Years.

Failure to eradicate completely hookworm disease from any one area during 15 years of scientific struggle against that scourge by its own and other health agencies is acknowledged in the Rockefeller foundation's annual report.

Intensive scientific study of certain control factors, notably the viability of the worms in various kinds of soil and other mediums and the possibility of making certain the existence of other forms of transmission than those already well understood, are suggested as offering hope of attaining more complete results. It is probable that such studies soon will be undertaken.

"Nothing could be simpler in theory than the few measures necessary for the control of hookworm infection," the report says. "The cycle of the worm from the moment the egg is deposited on the ground until it has reached the small intestine of its human host and developed to its adult stage is well understood, as are also the details of its life story and environment; and there are at least two drugs which are most potent in freeing the human system of the parasites. It should therefore be relatively simple to locate and to cure those who have the disease, to prevent others from contracting it, and thus to bring about, within limited areas at least, its complete eradication.

Although the problem of complete eradication is simple when stated on paper, it is not so in practice. The board has been engaged in work against hookworm disease since 1910, similar work was undertaken in Porto Rico in 1904, and the attack on the disease in the mines of Belgium, Holland and Germany began as early as 1902, yet it is impossible to point to any one mine or area from which the infection has been completely eradicated. In the mines of Germany it was reduced from 16.8 per cent in 1903 to .18 per cent in 1912; in those of the Netherlands, from 25 per cent in 1903 to 32 per cent in 1913, and in those of the Liege district of Belgium, from 22.8 per cent in 1902 to 1.2 per cent in 1913. These are the nearest recorded approaches to complete control.

Many Obstacles in Way.

"Many obstacles stand in the way of complete eradication, even in isolated areas having no immigration and with natural conditions that either limit or preclude intercourse with the outside world. It is seldom possible to examine every individual in an area or to treat until cured all who are found infected; when latrines of a proper type are installed in sufficient numbers to prevent soil pollution, it is still necessary to accustom the people to the use of them—and this is a task that usually requires a long period of education and enlightenment; and even when both the foregoing conditions are fulfilled there still remains for a time the danger of reinfection from hookworm larvae already in the soil."

After an extended survey of its experience with reinfections, which were found to show the highest rates on estates in Ceylon, the foundation reports:

"These high rates of reinfection should not be accepted as indicating that no considerable progress has been made toward bringing the disease under control. It should be remembered that the problem of hookworm control is primarily one of reducing mass infection. The practical phase of the task is concerned with the removal of the largest possible number of worms from the largest possible number of infected persons. Upon this basis the best criterion for judging the effectiveness of a curative campaign in any area is not the percentage of infected persons who are cured or who remain cured, but the proportion, expelled and destroyed, of the total worms harbored by the population.

"Even though in certain of the areas mentioned from 50 to 100 per cent of the persons formerly cured of the disease have since become reinfected there can be little doubt that as a result of treatment the average number of worms harbored by each infected person has been very materially reduced. Conditions extremely favorable for the prevalence and persistence of the infection exist practically throughout all countries in which the work has been conducted; there is at present lack of definite knowledge as to how long larvae remain infective in the soil; the latrine accommodations provided in many areas have been defective or inadequate, the habits of the people grossly insanitary, and, in addition, war conditions have interfered seriously with due and effective sanitary supervisions and reasonable regulation. Under these circumstances reinforcement was bound to occur in greater or less degree, but it will unquestionably diminish as effective sanitation is introduced and the curative measures are extended.

"The fact that after a series of efforts at control in different parts of the globe extending over a period of more than 15 years it is still impossible to point to any single area from which the disease has been completely eradicated suggests that perhaps the work is being carried out with a lack of scientific information on certain points concerning which definite knowledge is indispensable if complete control is to be achieved. It is hoped that a series of studies may soon be made which will supply definite experimental proof on the phases of hookworm control which still require further investigation.

"One of the most important factors in need of further study is that relating to the viability of hookworm larvae in soil and other media. In the past it has been commonly supposed that after a period of from six to ten months the soil would become sterile and the disease would gradually die out, but the evidence now at hand seems to indicate that soil once heavily infected—particularly in tropical countries where the temperature seldom or never drops to the freezing point—must remain infected for a considerable time even after sanitary conditions have been improved. Thus, Kofoid has recently reported that in the soil of California the larvae remained alive for 12 months, and it is probable that in more tropical climates they persist for even longer periods."

Part of the report is devoted to describing infection and sanitary surveys undertaken in various countries and recounting the difficulties of preventing the most serious source of infection—soil pollution. The providing of adequate latrines is set forth as the best method of bringing about this result.

"Some data from Arkansas and Texas brought together by means of the laboratory car Metchnikoff, during the treatment of infected soldiers in the southern states, suggests that there is a possibility of the infection being transmitted by dust. This subject is worthy of further study. The role played by insects, particularly flies, in transmitting the infection also remains to be thoroughly investigated," the chapter concludes.

HOT COFFEE FOR MINERS

Home Demonstration Agent in Arizona Solves Problem.

"Can you suggest some feasible way of supplying the men who are working in our mines with hot coffee at least once during their working hours?" the head of the welfare department of a large mining company, located in Cochise county, Arizona, asked the home demonstration agent of that county.

He desired an arrangement whereby the men could be supplied at the shafts of the mines with a hot drink to supplement their cold lunches. The home demonstration agent visited eight shafts with the foreman of the mines to observe conditions. Before making suggestions she also made an investigation of the character of lunch which was carried by the miners. She found that many take none at all. Of the 1,020 men who carried their lunches, only 61 had bottles which keep liquids hot. The rest ate an entirely cold meal at noon. This seemed to be one of the reasons for the lessened efficiency of the men in the afternoons. As a result of the investigation huge containers of coffee have been placed recently in strategic points at the shaft mouths so that the men have a hot drink with their noon-day meal.

JAPAN DRY SOON

Returning Prohibition Leader Says Philippines Also in Line.

The Philippine islands are going dry, and Japan will not be far behind, according to Dr. D. M. Gandier, prohibition leader of California, who arrived at Vancouver from Japan.

"I will not be surprised if prohibition is the national policy of Japan inside of five years," said Dr. Gandier.

"The Philippine legislature now in session is almost certain to pass a prohibition law for the islands." Dr. Gandier spent several months in China, the Philippines and Japan as a representative of the Anti-Saloon league of America.

"The leaders of Japan," said Dr. Gandier, "like the British leaders, are beginning to see that America, like an athlete, is training for world leadership through the adoption of prohibition."

BIRD PUZZLES WOODMEN

Strange Catch of a New York State Pheasant Hunter.

Martin Schledorn of Danville, N. Y., a recently returned overseas service man, went shooting pheasants the other day. He came home with a large bird which he shot on the wing, thinking it a pheasant.

Its coloring is beautiful, the great wings, lined with white and gray feathers, measuring 42 inches from tip to tip. The tail is of brown feathers with a breast of cream and brown mottled, the back a dark gray and white. Its curved beak and huge talons look like those of a young eagle, but the older hunters here think it is an unusually large hen hawk. The bird was shot in a swale on the Ossian hills.

Cow Produced 1,000 Pounds of Butter.

A registered yearling, Lulu Alpha of Ashburn, N. Y., produced 13,639 pounds of milk, from which 1,000 pounds of butter was made in the year ending November 1. This is believed to break all records for butter production.

BATTLE-SWEPT FRANCE ASTIR

Heroic Efforts Being Made to Recoup Fortunes.

MAKING STEADY PROGRESS

Rehabilitation Is Observable in Revival of Old Industries, the Establishment of New Ones and the Introduction of Modern Equipment—Return to Normal Basis of Flocks and Herds of Animals Depleted by the War.

Gradual transformation of the battle-swept regions of northern France back to their normal conditions is being everywhere noted by the Associated Press correspondent, who, with special facilities extended by the government, is making a tour through the devastated regions to observe their steady progress toward recovery.

This rehabilitation is observable in the revival of old industries, the establishment of new ones and the introduction of modern equipment, and it is even noticeable in the return of vast flocks and herds of domestic animals, depleted by the war, back to the normal basis required for the domestic needs of this region.

Small Farmers Try to Recoup.

When war swept over the ten departments along the battle front, domestic animals disappeared, most of the stock being taken as food for the armies, while the birds and fowls fled from the concussion of the great guns. Now, with the gradual return to pre-war conditions, the thrifty French peasant and small farmer is making heroic efforts to recoup his fortune and to rehabilitate his land.

Domestic animals are being greatly treasured for their food value, and are cared for by their owners with the same solicitude shown toward their children. Poultry and rabbits are kept in warm quarters and fed regularly, even though it is necessary now and then for the people themselves to go without a square meal.

New impetus also is given to the breeding of small domestic animals in order to replenish the restricted supply.

Cattle Are Not Plentiful.

Because of the fact that pastures were for the most part destroyed by shell fire and gas, it has been found very difficult to get forage for cows, and therefore cattle are scarce at present.

In the field of industry the noticeable development among the French is the inclination to modernize plants destroyed by the ravages of the war. Naturally slow to make changes and suspicious of new things, Frenchmen are beginning to step forward. They are installing electric power, applying the latest ideas in mechanics, reorganizing their enterprises and building a firm foundation in preparation for the developments they believe the future will bring forth.

FUGITIVE TURK A KING

Enver Pasha, a Pro-German, Has Accepted Kurdish Throne.

Enver Pasha, former Turkish minister of war, has been crowned king of Kurdistan, the Turkish region lying between Mesopotamia and Persia. Kurdistan is an extensive region with ill-defined borders. Its population includes 2,000,000 people, most of whom are Mohammedans.

Enver Pasha was minister of war in the Turkish cabinet from January, 1914, to October, 1918. He was leader of the Young Turks, an ardent pro-German and an enthusiastic pupil of the German general von der Goltz. After the signing of the armistice Enver fled from Constantinople to Berlin in disguise. He was arrested on request of the Turkish government, but escaped. Though a sentence of death rests over him for acts committed during the war, he is a king and probably will escape punishment.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR ALL

Director of Employment Service Finds Industrial Situation Good.

Unemployment now is less alarming than at any time since the signing of the armistice, according to a statement made by W. H. Skinner, acting director general of the United States employment service.

Reports from 22 states indicate that in Wisconsin and Michigan there is a shortage of help. In Arkansas, Tennessee and Indiana there is reported a slight shortage of jobs. In Chicago and New York there is more unemployment than anywhere in the country.

The slight unemployment that is reported is regarded as a result of the difficulty in connecting the right man with the job and of strikes, which create an artificial condition.

WHY

Palestine Welcomes Occupation by British

The city of Alexandria, Egypt, has allowed the celebrated engineer, Mr. Macklin, to go to Jerusalem at the request of the authorities there to inaugurate certain important sanitary reforms. Not only is the Holy city to have the improvements, but others which will be bestowed upon the whole of Palestine. A railway now extends from the valley of the Nile to Palestine, over which daily are brought fresh vegetables and fruit to the Egyptian cities, which find a ready market and are a sure source of income to the people, who have been living under the shadow of death since the war began. The sea route is also open to trade, causing an exchange of commodities between the two countries via the Suez canal. But this is not all the British army of occupation is doing. It is setting out forests in the wastes, planting trees in the towns of Palestine, in her streets, on her hills and high places, in her valleys and highways, that the moisture may be conserved and the land become again a garden, not of the gods, but God's garden. It is proposed to plant eucalyptus trees in the streets of Jerusalem to purify the air, and other shade trees like those in England and America. Another blessing British thought is giving that parched land is the building of reservoirs on the heights about the Holy city, from which the surrounding country may be watered during the dry season.

iron to lose its firm, rigid texture, instead of which it takes the form of a fine powder or dust, usually of a reddish color. The iron thus combined is not "lost," it is simply changed in character and appearance. Since, in its new form, it is easily blown or brushed away, it may seem to have vanished, although it has really only been dispersed.

The process of rusting is called "slow oxidation." In perfectly dry air iron does not rust. The presence of moisture is essential to set the action going. The agents concerned in rusting are oxygen, carbon dioxide and hydrogen. Both air and water contain oxygen, but the hydrogen comes from the water, and the carbon dioxide usually from the air.

Experiment has shown that iron in contact with water and oxygen does not rust unless there is carbon dioxide present. But there are some other acids besides carbon dioxide which may induce rusting, such as sulphurous and nitric acids and others found in smoke from chimneys. Whether iron rusts more rapidly in water or in air depends upon circumstances. If the water is pure and free from bubbles of air, no rust appears, but a trace of carbon dioxide in the water produces rust very quickly.

Will Densford made a business trip to Indianapolis this morning.

IRON NOT "LOST" IN RUSTING
How Combination With Oxygen Merely Causes Changes in the Form of the Metal.

When iron "rusts" it combines with oxygen and forms a substance known as oxide and hydroxide of iron. The combination with oxygen causes the iron to lose its firm, rigid texture, instead of which it takes the form of a fine powder or dust, usually of a reddish color. The iron thus combined is not "lost," it is simply changed in character and appearance. ### A NEW STUNT FOR A FORD AUTOMOBILE

"Lizzie" Turns Completely Around, Skids Into Ditch and Demolishes Rear Wheel.

A new stunt by a Ford automobile was performed in the city this afternoon when a car said to belong to Herman Sierp, of Tampico, struck a frog in the interurban track in front of the Princess Theatre on South Chestnut street, turned completely around and skidded into the gutter and completely demolished a rear wheel. The car was being driven south on Chestnut street when the accident happened and when it stopped skidding it was facing north. The owner secured a new wheel for the "critter" and drove it home, as none of the mechanical parts of the car was damaged. The driver escaped injury.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. William H. Johns, speaking as President of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, recently said:

"The newspaper has such a quick, direct appeal to the public that it is destined to be more and more recognized as the biggest, most essential and thoroughly recognized factor in national as well as local advertising, just as all concede today that even the smallest local newspaper helps frame national opinion on matters of politics, morale, tastes and habits."

SAYS DEFENDANT IS AN INFERIOR PERSON

Specialist Testifies for New, on Trial for Murder of Freda Lesser in Los Angeles.

By United Press

Los Angeles, January 3—Harry S. New's mental condition was subjected to further detailed testimony when his trial opened today. Dr. E.

B. Hoag, of Pasadena, mental expert and special lecturer for the University of California, analyzed New's case as follows:

"New is constitutionally an inferior person, is feeble minded and insane."

He based his testimony on an examination of New, a study of New's history and depositions presented at the trial. It is understood the prosecution will deny the allegation that New is of inferior mind but will attempt to prove that he is only dull.

Service of Life.

Life should be measured by usefulness, as it is to serve the world that we are entitled to live in it. And after all service, well and faithfully performed, brings the only real happiness: all the outward pomp and insignia of rank are but badges of service. "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister," not to be served, but to serve, is the utterance of the highest authority in spiritual matters. It was a most interesting object lesson that Jesus gave his disciples when he washed their feet.

Read the Bible and Think.

"It is a good plan to read a book of the Bible through rapidly at a sitting in a shady garden, or on a cliff looking over the sea; then to close the book and think."—Church Family Newspaper.

Transformed Into New Man.

As iron put into the fire loathes its rust and becometh clearly red hot, so he that wholly turneth himself unto God puts off all slothfulness, and is transformed into a new man.—Thomas a Kempis.

Forgive and Forgiven.

Of him that hopes to be forgiven it is indispensably required that he forgive. It is, therefore, superfluous to urge any other motive. On this great duty eternity is suspended, and to him that refuses to practice it, the throne of mercy is inaccessible, and the Savior of the world has been born in vain.—Johnson.

Fellow-Worker With God.

We are God's fellow-workers in the work of human salvation. He is depending upon our co-operation.

Daily Prayer.

Oh Lord, we thank thee that men turn to thee; the measure of their need is the measure of thy supply. Let thy spirit dwell in our spirits, and then all shall be well within and peaceful without. We pray thee to give us a fuller and firmer, and more continual, and more vigorous and efficacious confidence in thyself. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Character Building.

Life is mainly an opportunity for character building and testing.

Opportunities.

Opportunities approach only those who use them.—Emerson.

The Broad Hat.

A broad hat does not always cover a venerable head.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

'BUFFALO' JONES ON SCOUTING

Just before "Buffalo" Jones passed over the Great Divide, where all the pony tracks point one way, he called his daughter to his side and said:

"Tell Dan Beard that I used to hoot at the Boy Scout movement, but I had to be sick in bed two years and see my grandson training to be worthy of a membership in the scouts to realize what Boy Scout means, and tell him I hope every boy in the world will come to know what it means."

This deathbed comment of the mighty hunter has just come in a letter from the family to the national scout commissioner at his home in Flushing, L. I.

Colonel Jones is the one whom Zane Grey named "the last of the plainsmen." He is the man who alone and unaided lassoed and hog-tied a lot of buffalo, and who later went to Africa and lassoed every wild beast of that country that he met, including a full-grown lion.

"Buffalo" Jones belonged to the "Buckskin men," writes Dan Beard, "the race which is now extinct, the race which included in its ranks such men as George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, George Rogers Clark, Simon Kenton, Daniel Boone, Davy Crockett, Kit Carson, Texas Jack, Jim Bridger, Audubon, Catlin, Custer, Joe Meeks—men who would dare and do almost anything, men of virility, aggressive and full of initiative. These are the men who made it possible for the rest of us to live in this land."

WANT TO BE A PIONEER SCOUT?

A boy who lives on a farm, far from town and with no pals within reach, can be a member of the largest boys' organization in the world, as well as the city boy.

He can pass his tests, earn badges and medals, and wear the khaki with the rest.

Probably he will excel the city boys in scoutcraft, because of his knowledge of out-of-door life.

Country boys over twelve years of age, who are interested in camping, signaling, handicraft, first aid, swimming, hiking, use of ax and knife, map-making and reading, observation of trees, animals, plants, rocks and stars, agriculture, fishing, arts and sciences, athletics, automobiles, aviation, bees, bugling, business, civics, conservation, cycling, dairying, electricity, firemanship, forestry, gardening, languages, life-saving, machinery, marksmanship, mining, photography, poultry, trades, seamanship, surveying or wireless are invited to write to the Chief Pioneer Scout, Boy Scouts of America, Room 711, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City, for information about becoming a pioneer scout.

MUSIC STILL HAS CHARMS.

Boy Scout Bugler, Sounding the Call That Brings the Boys Together.

LUMBERMEN SCOUT DADDIES.

The president of the Lumbermen's credit bureau of Miami, Fla., came in to the scout headquarters recently and created quite a stir. Before he could get seated he asserted that the lumbermen of Miami wanted to "daddy" a troop of boy scouts.

How did they do it? Easy. First, they had a desire to do a good turn by some of the boyhood of their city. Second, they decided they could do it best through scouting. Third, they started out in the lumberman's way to get things done, and in three weeks they have a scoutmaster with nine boys to start a troop.

PERSHING'S COUSIN A SCOUT

A cousin of General Pershing is the boy scout chief in Oklahoma City. Writing of the trustworthiness of these "kids in khaki," Scout Executive J. E. Pershing says:

"Not long since the manager of one of Oklahoma City's biggest concerns phoned the headquarters and asked for a scout to work in his office."

"I want a scout, because I can depend on him, he is trustworthy."

"He got his scout and still has him. A leader of one of our leading clubs wanted 20 scouts for a particular service during the war. The chief expressed doubt about his ability to get them, and suggested he ask another source. The answer came quickly:

"If I can't get scouts, I don't want any. I can trust a scout."

I might multiply these instances a hundredfold. The fact is the public has come to trust a scout because he is trustworthy.

But after all, the real test of a scout is his home life. If dad or mother can say: "Our boy is a good scout, he is worthy of our trust," then he is a good scout indeed.

A scout is trustworthy. This law of scouting is heard around the world. It is the foundation, the flower of the scout movement.

SOLDIER JOINS SCOUT RANKS.

Widely known among boy scouts and prominent as a teacher in south Georgia, Prof. W. L. Sprouse, returned soldier from France, begins his work as scout commissioner of Waycross and Ware county with the reorganization of the movement in that section.

Scouting is fortunate in lining up such capable men who have an abounding interest in boys and a great love for the outdoors.

Mr. Sprouse was reared in the foothills of the Cumberland mountains, educated at Peabody college and the University of Tennessee, has taught in public and private schools for eight years, served with the A. E. F. overseas for nearly a year, has traveled extensively, lecturing the boy scouts on the Mammoth cave, where he has made explorations, and for five years has been a hustling scoutmaster in this section.

"I shall hope to see the day when scouting will become a tremendous factor in training our Southern boys for citizenship," said Professor Sprouse. "Organized boyhood has won a prominent and lasting place in our national life because of what boy scouts did for the country and the world during the war."

SCOUTS LOOKING UP SOLDIERS

Again the boy scouts have been called into service by Uncle Sam. The treasury department is having difficulty in locating many of the returned service men, whose war risk insurance is apt to become void unless payments are kept up.

Secretary Carter Glass says: "It is impossible for the treasury department to reach a large proportion of the demobilized men by mail, for the reason that many of them are not returning to their former homes, or have changed their addresses, or for the time being are transient. If they permit their insurance to lapse and die before they reinstate it, their dependents cannot receive any insurance from the government, and consequently there will be widespread dependency, destitution and suffering throughout the country during the years to come."

The services of the boy scouts have been called upon to aid in preventing the threatened condition. Every troop will be supplied with a number of government posters to be placed in favorable places.

SCOUTS A FAITH RESTORATIVE.

So common is the sight of the scout uniform, so far-reaching is the scout service, and so deep is its impression on the American imagination, that it is hard to think that scouts have not always been.

There are times when all of us despair of the future of the race, so rampant seems evil, so triumphant and arrogant seems vice and selfishness. We know nothing that can so swiftly restore faith for humanity as the sight of a troop of uniformed scouts.

Give the scout movement its rightful chance and when America's present boyhood becomes America's manhood, a bond of comradeship, a bond of brotherhood, shall have been forged which it will be impossible to break.

Then we shall have the brotherhood of man, then we shall have true Americanism.

WHAT KEEPS SCOUTS BUSY.

The juvenile probationers in Montclair, N. J., are handled at the boy scout office.

A wheel chair was bought for an invalid boy by the scout troop in Poughquag, N. Y.

Scouts in Wyano, Penn., raised enough money to buy a bell for a church and also pledged $50.

As a novel "good turn," the scouts in Troop No. 4 of Dormont, Penn., have planted 25 cherry trees "just for the birds."

Boy scouts of Vero, Fla., assisted in harvesting the potato crop, as there was a scarcity of labor, working for six weeks in the fields and camping out the entire time. They also assisted in fighting forest fires.

The St. Paul Housewives' league is launching a campaign to have all soldier uniforms made over into boy scout suits for the soldiers' young brothers or into more conventional garments for the young brothers who have no ambition to be scouts.

A Prayer.

Almighty and living God, we beseech thee to look with love and mercy on us. Keep us in thy faith and fear. Give us grace to resist the devil, and to renounce all his works and temptations. Guard us from the lusts and sins of the flesh. Shield us from the corruption of the world. Make us diligent and faithful in our appointed work. Keep us patient under trial. In anxiety and worry, help us to find trust and peace in thee. All of which we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior. Amen.

The Finished Work

By REV. GEORGE GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.—It is finished.—John 19:30.
"From the cross uplifted high,
Where the Saviour deigns to die,
What melodious sounds I hear
Bursting on my ravished ear."

"It is finished!" is the triumphant cry that forever closes the mighty transaction of the cross. Finished according to all that had been written of him. Finished according to all the types and shadows of the law.

I. What was finished? Hear his first recorded utterance: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" "My Father's business" began when sin began and God made proclamation of a coming Seed of the woman, then, in holy symbolism, set forth the death of that Seed and its blessed results for believers by taking the skins of animals to make garments for Adam and Eve. Now the work is done, and his murderers are casting lots for his seamless robe—that robe of righteousness that not alone covers the shame of our moral nakedness but becomes an adornment for the holy eye of God. He who hangs upon that cross, in shame and nakedness, to provide this garment for his foes has forever settled the question of sin so that it can never be opened again between God and the feeblest believer on his Son.

"There is therefore now no judgment to them who are in Christ Jesus," for they have been judged once for all in the Person of Another who, to its awful dregs, has drained the cup of divine wrath against sin.

"It is finished!" Oh soul, think not that anything can be added. If you could live a thousand years in sinless perfection and in unswerving devotion to God and his service, it would add not one whit to what Jesus Christ did for you. The mere thought of doing so would be robbery; stealing the glory that belongs to him alone. The work is done, and the gospel is the proclamation of that finished work in which God is inviting men to rest with himself. He is not asking you to do something, but to accept what has been done for you.

These two little words, "do" and "done," express the wide divergence between all the world's religion and our holy Christianity. Man's religion insists upon doing and sends its adherents to the treadmill of their own fleshly activities. Christianity is God's glad tidings to lost men of what is done, once and forever. This finished work is the sure foundation of the soul's enduring peace. There is no other.

II. That finished work was a divine accomplishment. On the mount of transfiguration Moses and Elijah spake with Jesus "of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem." The death of God's Son was not that of a martyr nor that of a hero. It was the death of one who, knowing no sin, was "made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God to him" (II Cor. 5:21).

It was unnatural. Dying men, spent with agony and blood-shedding, do not cry with a loud voice, as he did. Nor had death the slightest claim upon him, for he was holy.

It was supernatural. Hath he not said, "I lay down my life for the sheep . . . no man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father." And, having uttered the conquering cry of the text, he "yielded up the ghost," literally, he "dismissed his spirit."

It was preternatural, for he is "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

III. The finished work is divinely attested.

1. Witness the rent veil. "The veil of the temple was rent in twain." The veil concealed the holiest where the presence of God was manifest in the cloud of glory, and barred all approach thereto, save by the high priest, but by him only once a year and with solemn rites of expiation. Now God rends it in testimony to his acceptance of the work of his Son. The way into his presence is opened at last, so that the vilest of earth may draw nigh along the blood-sprinkled way, and he is himself at liberty to come forth in grace to men.

2. Witness the rent rocks. "The earth did quake and the rocks rent."

3. Witness the rent graves. "The graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose." And thus God did show the power of Christ's death over death. Going into it he robbed it of its power and holds now in his own hand its keys. "The sting of death is sin," but "he hath made him to be sin for us" and he has taken away that sting forever.

Poor sinner, God is resting now in the finished work of his Son, and you may rest there, too, if you will.

"Yes, that he has forced the girl to assent to some form of ceremony, probably legal in this country. I overheard enough between him and Rale to suspect it, at least, and she is even now under the influence of some drug. She hasn't spoken, nor does she seem to know what is going on about her. They strapped her into the saddle."

"The h— they did."

"It has been a hellish affair all the way through, and the only way in which I can serve her, if this is so, is by getting her away—as far away as possible, and where this devil can never find her again. What bothers me right now is your case."

"Mine? Lord, what's the matter with me?"

"Considerable, I should say. You can't be left here alone to face the result of this night's work. If Gaskins is dead from the blow you struck him these two fellows will swear your life away just for revenge. Even if you told the whole story, what chance would you have? That would only expose us, and still fail to clear you. It would merely be your word against theirs—your word against no witnesses, unless we were caught."

"I reckon that's true; I wasn't thinkin' 'bout it."

"Then there is only the one road to take, Tim," I insisted. "We've got to strike the trail together."

"What?"

"I cannot answer that now; I haven't thought it out yet. We can talk that matter over as we ride. I have a map with me, which will help us decide the best course to choose. The first thing is to get out of this neighborhood beyond pursuit. If you only had a horse."

"That's two critters down in the creek bottom. I reckon that Kirby and Gaskins must be tied 'em thar."

"Good; then you will go; you agree with me?"

"Thar ain't nuthin' else for me ter do—hangin' ain't never bin no hobby o' mine."

"Then let's start," I decisively. "Pick up one of those horses down on the bottom and turn the other one loose. I'll lead on down the trail and you can meet us at the ford—once across the creek we can decide which way to travel; there must be four hours of darkness yet."

I picked up the trailing rein of my horse and slipped my arm through it. Tim faded away in the gloom like a vanishing shadow. The young woman next me, strapped securely to her saddle, made no movement, exhibited no sign of interest; her head and body drooped, yet her hands grasped the pommel as though she still retained some dim conception of her situation. The face under her hood was bent forward and shaded and her eyes, although they seemed open, gave no heed to my presence. I touched her hands—thank God, they were moist and warm, but when I spoke her name it brought no response.

I started forward on foot, leading my horse, the others trailing after through the darkness. Knowing nothing of the way, I was thus better able to pick the path, yet I found this not difficult, as it was rather plainly outlined by the forest growth on either side. The trail was clay with a few small stones embedded in it, and the horses made little noise in their descent, except once when Elsie's animal slipped and sent a loosened bit of rock rolling down to splash in some pool below. We came to the bank of the creek at last, a narrow stream, easily fordable, but with a rather steep shore line beyond, and waited there a moment until Tim emerged from out the black woods at our right and joined us. He was mounted, and, believing the time had arrived for more rapid movement, I also swung up into saddle and ranged the girl's horse beside mine.

They were not stock to be proud of, yet they did fairly well, Tim's mount evidently the best of the four. The going was decidedly better once we had topped the bank. We may have ridden for two miles without a word, for, although I had no intention of proceeding far in this direction, I could discover no opportunity for changing our course so as to baffle pursuit. That Kirby and Rale would endeavor to follow us at the earliest opportunity was most probable. They were neither of them the sort to accept defeat without a struggle, and, after the treatment they had received, the desire for revenge would be uppermost. Nor thus far would there be any difficulty in their picking up our trail, at least as far as the creek crossing, and this would assure them the direction we had chosen.

Then suddenly, out of the mysterious darkness which closed us in, another grove loomed up immediately in our front, and the trail plunged sharply downward into the depths of a rugged ravine. I was obliged to dismount and feel my way cautiously to the bottom, delighted to discover there was a smoothly flowing, narrow stream, running from the eastward between high banks, overhung by trees. It was a dismal, gloomy spot, a veritable cave of darkness, yet apparently the very place I had been seeking for our purpose.

"Kennedy."

"Right yere, sir. Lord, but it's dark—found anything?"

"There is a creek here. I don't know where it flows from, but it seems to come out of the east. One thing is certain, we have got to get off this trail. If we can lead the horses up stream a way and then circle back it would keep those fellows guessing for a while. Come here and see what you think of the chance."

"Ye let me go ahead with the nigger gurl, an' then follow after us, leadin' Miss Beaucaire's hoss. By jeminy crickets, 'tain't deep' nough for ter drown us enyway, an' I ain't much afereed o' the dark. Thar's likely ter be sum place whar we kin get out up thar. Whar the h— are them hosses?"

We succeeded in locating the animals by feeling and I waited on the edge of the bank, the two reins wrapped about my arm, until I heard the others go splashing down into the water. Then I also groped my own way cautiously forward, the two horses trailing behind me, down the sharply shelving bank into the stream. Tim chose his course near to the opposite shore, and I followed his lead closely, guided largely by the splashing of Elsie's animal through the shallow water. Our movement was a very slow and cautious one, Kennedy halting frequently to assure himself that the passage ahead was safe. Fortunately the bottom was firm and the current not particularly strong, our greatest obstacle being the low-hanging branches which swept against us.

I think we must have waded thus to exceed a mile when we came to a fork in the stream and plumped into a tangle of uprooted trees, which ended our further progress. Between the two branches, after a little search, we discovered a gravelly beach, on which the horses' hoofs would leave few permanent marks. Beyond this gravel we plunged into an open wood, through whose intricacies we were compelled to grope blindly, Tim and I both afoot, and constantly calling to each other, so as not to become separated. I had lost all sense of direction, when this forest finally ended, and we again emerged upon open prairie, with a myriad of stars shining overhead.

The island in the Swamp.

The relief of thus being able to perceive each other and gain some view of our immediate surroundings after that struggle through darkness cannot be expressed in words. We were upon a rather narrow tongue of land, the two diverging forks of the stream closing us in. So, after a short conversation, we continued to ride straight forward, keeping rather close to the edge of the wood, so as to better conceal our passage. Our advance, while not rapid, was steady, and we must have covered several miles before the east began to show gray, the ghastly light of the new dawn revealing our tired faces. Ahead of us stretched an extensive swamp, with pools of stagnant water shimmering through lush grass and brown fringes of cat-tails bordering their edges. Some distance out in this desolation, and only half revealed through the dim light, a somewhat higher bit of land, rocky on its exposed side, its crest crowned with trees, arose like an island. Tim stared across at it, shading his eyes with one hand.

"If we was goin' ter stop enywhar, cap," he said finally. "I reckon thar ain't no better place then thar, pervidin' we kin git thar."

I followed his gaze, and noticed that the mulatto girl also lifted her head to look.

"We certainly must rest," I confessed. "Miss Beaucaire seems to be sleeping, but I am sure is thoroughly exhausted. Do you see any way of getting across the swamp?"

He did not answer, but Elsie instantly pointed toward the left, crying out eagerly:

"Sure, Ah do. The lan' is higher 'long thar, sah—yer kin see shale rock."

"So you can; it almost looks like a dyke. Let's try it, Tim."

It was not exactly a pleasant passage, or a safe one, but the continual increase in light aided us in picking our way above the black water on either hand. I let my horse follow those in front as he pleased and held tightly to the bit of the one bearing Elsie. The island proved a small one, not exceeding a hundred yards wide, rather sparsely covered with forest trees, the space between these thick with undergrowth. What first attracted my gaze after penetrating the tree fringe was the glimpse of a small shack, built of poles, and thatched with coarse grass, which stood nearly in the center of the island. It was a rudely constructed, primitive affair, and to all appearances deserted.

"Hold the horses here, Tim; let me see what we have ahead first."

I approached the place from the rear, peering in through the narrow openings between the upright poles. The light was so poor I was not able to perceive much, but did succeed in fully convincing myself that the dismal shack was unoccupied. The door stood unlatched and I pushed it open. A single glance served to reveal everything the place contained. Without doubt it had been the late abode of Indians, who, in all probability, had fled hastily to join Black Hawk in his foray up Rock river. What interested me most was a small bit of jerked deer meat which still hung against an upright and the rude stone fireplace in the center of the hut, with an opening above to carry away the smoke.

I had found during the night a fair supply of hard bread in my saddle-bag, and now, with this additional gift of Providence, felt assured, at least, of one sufficient meal.

"It is all right, Tim, there is no one here. An old Indian camp with nothing but a hunk of jerked deer meat left behind. Elsie, gather up some of that old wood yonder and build a fire. Kennedy and I will look after Miss Beaucaire."

It was bright day by this time, the red of the rising sun in the sky, and I could trace the radius of swamp land stretching about us on every hand, a grim, desolate scene even in the beauty of that clear dawn. We had been fortunate enough to approach the spot along the only available pathway which led to this little oasis, and a more secure hiding place it would be difficult to find. I felt almost at ease for the present and satisfied to rest here for several hours.

Tim assisted me in unstrapping Elsie, and lifting her from the saddle, and, as she made no effort to help herself, the two of us carried her to a warm, sunny spot beside the wall of the hut. Her cramped limbs refused to support her body, and her eyes, then open, yet retained that vacant look so noticeable from the first. The only change was in the puzzled way with which she stared into our faces, as though memory might be struggling back, and she was vaguely endeavoring to understand.

Tim led the horses away and staked them out where they could crop the rich, dewy grass. After removing the saddles he followed the mulatto girl into the hut, and I could hear the murmur of their voices. I endeavored to address Elsie, seeking thus to awaken her to some sense of my presence, but she merely smiled meaninglessly, leaned her head wearily back against the poles and closed her eyes.

It was a poor meal enough, although it sufficed to dull hunger and yield us some strength. Elsie succeeded in choking down a few morsels, but drank thirstily. It was pitiful to watch her, and to mark the constant effort she was making to force the return of memory. I had Elsie bathe her face with water and while, no doubt, this refreshed her somewhat she only rested her head back on my coat, which I had folded for a pillow, and again closed her heavy eyes. The negroess appeared so tired I bade her lie down and sleep, and soon after Tim also disappeared. I remained there alone, guarding the woman I loved.

How were we to escape, burdened by this helpless girl, from pursuit, which perhaps had already started from Yellow Banks? At all hazards I must now prevent this dazed, stupefied woman from ever again falling into the power of Joe Kirby. That was the one fact I knew. I would rather kill her with my own hand, for I was convinced the fellow actually possessed a legal right, which I could not hope to overthrow. However it had been accomplished, through what villainy, made no odds—she was his wife, and could only be released through process of law. He could claim her, hold her in spite of me, in spite of herself. No influence I might bring to bear would save her now from this contamination. It would all be useless, a thing for laughter. Her signature—of which Kirby had boasted—and the certificate signed by the dead Gaskins, would offset any possible efforts I might put forth. There remained no hope except through light; outdistancing our pursuers; finding a route to safety through the wilderness which they would never suspect.

I must find an unknown path, an untraveled trail. Our only hope lay in baffling pursuit, in getting far beyond Kirby's grip. I dragged the map out from its silk wrapping and spread it forth on the ground between my knees. It was the latest government survey, given me when I first departed for the North, and I already knew every line and stream by heart.

URGES PEOPLE TO FIGHT CATARRH WITH SIMPLE HOME MADE REMEDY

Can Make Pint at Home and Costs Little, Says Leading Druggist of Covington, Ky., Who Has Made Special Study of Catarrh.

Says: Inflamed Nostrils Invite Influenza

People who say that catarrh is a disease not to be taken seriously are harshly rebuked by a Kentucky druggist who has for years been much interested in the growth of this loathsome, yet altogether too common disease.

He claims that the sore, tender, inflamed membrane of the nostrils and throat is a prolific breeding ground for germs—not only the germs of Influenza, but many other kinds as well.

If people would only stop experimenting for two weeks and try a simple remedy made of Mentholized Arcine mixed with enough boiled water to make a full pint, half of the catarrh in this country would be abolished. It's really no joke for people who don't know about this simple recipe to be constantly sniffing and snuffing, blowing and hawking, when all these obnoxious symptoms as well as the foul discharge can be made to disappear in a few days.

Ask for three-quarters of an ounce of Mentholized Arcine—that's all you need and after you have mixed it with enough boiled water to make a pint, gargle the throat twice daily and snuff or spray some up the nostrils, as directed.

The tender nostrils will soon lose their soreness, heal up, and be clean and healthy.

Important Reminder: Just as soon as anyone in the family gets a cold in the head, check it at once with this same medicine.

MADE A MEAL FOR SPIDER

His Snakeship, Entangled in Web,
Had No Chance When It Came to Infigthing.

This spider, which caught a snake, is of the black and yellow kind, common in country regions among the bushes or along the roadside. This particular spider was very large, being about 2 1/2 inches long, including the legs. The web was very light, but strong, and was made in a flat circle with the spider in the center at all times, with his head down, as shown in the picture. The snake was of the common brown variety, about six inches long and one-quarter inch thick, which subsist on bugs, spiders, etc. This snake was in a bush over the web, and, on seeing the spider, decided to drop on the latter and knock him from the web and then catch him when he fell on the ground. But his plans were clearly a failure, for, when he dropped he missed the spider and became tangled in the web. Like a flash the spider was upon him, and wound many yards of web around the intruder, thus holding him fast. The spider killed the snake with his bites and sucked his blood.—Exchange.

NO CIRCUIT COURT

Several Cases Set Down For Trial
For Next Week.

No court was held at Brownstown today as no cases were set down for trial. Several minor matters were disposed of by Judge James A. Cox Friday afternoon.

The case of Holmes Thompson vs. William R. Gallemore, for damages, which was set for trial in circuit court Monday, has been postponed until a later date. The case was tried in circuit court several months ago and a verdict given for the plaintiff. A motion for a new trial was later granted by Judge Cox.
